

BIG FLEET OF SEAL PIRATES

JAPAN SENDING 38 SCHOONERS TO BERING SEA.

Reckless Slaughter Planned During Open Season While the Empire Is Protecting Its Own Fisheries—No Remedy in International Law or Treaties.

VICTORIA, B. C., April 17.—The Japanese sealing schooner Nito Maru, of Miyako, owned by K. Kichiro of Miyako, Japan, is in port here, says she is the vanguard of a fleet of thirty-eight schooners which will go to Bering Sea this year.

The Nito Maru is thirty days out from Miyako, Japan, and put in here owing to her chronometer being broken. There are seven other Japanese sealing schooners now on this coast, which will hunt during May and the early part of June on the British Columbia and Alaskan coasts, following the homing herds, toward Bering Sea throughout the closed season.

The Japanese vessels now on the British Columbia coast are: Kinsel Maru, Capt. Fitchie, which vessel hunted off this coast last season and was alongside the schooner Carlotta G. Cox last May when that vessel, recently captured, was seized.

Toro Maru, Capt. Hagaman, a Bonin Island sealer, who has not been previously on this coast.

Kaiwo Maru, one of the two sealers seized last year in Bering Sea by the United States revenue cutter Perry and afterward released.

Alfuku Maru, in charge of Capt. Thompson, one of the former Victorians arrested by the Russians in 1905 when the schooner Houkousen Maru was sunk by the Russian cruiser Gromobol.

Matou Maru, on which Fred Cochrane, a former Victorian sealer, is engaged as one of the hunters.

Toyoi Maru, one of the schooners concerned in the raid of June, 1906, on the Seapoint rookery on the Pribilof Islands, now in command of Capt. Harry Jacobson, a former Victorian sealer, who has with him several Victorians.

"There will be about thirty-eight schooners from Japanese ports in Bering Sea this year, much more than went there last year," said Capt. Watanabe. "Last year our catch was not so much skins. There was an average of 270 seal skins for each schooner, and about thirty-five schooners which went to the Sea of Japan, the Kurile Islands, the Copper Islands and Bering Sea sealing grounds took about 10,000 skins. The small schooners only hunt now in the Sea of Japan and off the Kurile Islands, Copper Islands and Bering Sea. There will be trip to the sealing grounds in Bering Sea this year, for Japanese are not governed by regulations there."

On this coast the Canadian sealers are pursuing to the end of the season for them the end of the month. From that time until the beginning of August the sealing grounds are closed to them on this side of the 16th meridian. The closed season is part of the restoration policy upon the Canadian sealers in consequence of the modus vivendi to which Great Britain and the United States agreed following the Paris tribunal of 1894. The Japanese Government has been making the modus vivendi, and at that time no thought being held that in the years to come there would be a large fleet of Japanese sealers, the sealing schooners like the Nito Maru, now in port, and her mates flying the Japanese flag are not bound by any closed season.

At this time the migrating seals are following the coast northward, returning from their southern wintering grounds on the Pribilof Islands in Bering Sea. The regulations were made for the purpose of protecting the homing seal and the seal and the sealers. The great fleet of Japanese vessels may go into Bering Sea with the homing seal, use firearms and hunt the fur bearers to within three miles of the rookeries. There have been instances where they have not stopped at the three mile limit set by international law, but the raid by the schooner Toyoi Maru and Myie Maru in 1906, when five Japanese were killed and twelve wounded, being a case in point.

Last year there were many raids at the Copper Islands and some of the sealers were seized. Those on board the schooner Nito Maru, now in port, and her mates, Diana was sunk last year by a Russian steamer when caught attempting a raid at Copper Islands. The rookeries at Robben bank which was taken over by the Japanese in the Okhotsk Sea as part of the haul of war are being well protected, however, and the old gunboat Musashi is patrolling there preventing all sealing for a term of five years. The Japanese Government is allowing the sealers to go in to allow the herd to recuperate from the effect of the disastrous raids which occurred there while the Russian gulf was withdrawn during the war. In one raid made by five schooners in 1907, seven thousand sealers were taken from this rookery, and the raids thinned the herd so much that when the Japanese Government returned the island it abolished sealing in that vicinity to give the seals a chance to accumulate again.
